Recently my town has been on a streak with things. In August a man by the name of Brian Wells died by a bomb strapped to his neck exploded and died. Then this month a body was found in a freezer and after a few days one of the people pinned on helping the killer was a Substitute teacher at my school. I had him two years ago in my freshman year of HS. He seemed like a normal person. I know no one cares, but like I was bored so I posted this.

I seriously doubt it had anything to do with me. LOL

Though when he was arrested, I heard that in his wallet, he was carrying around a write-up I did on him back when I was his boss at Domino's.

I know this is waaay off topic but I'm reading thru this thread and the only thing saying to myself is "She worked at Dominos. Of all the places, why Dominos?" Then I just thought and said to myself, "Well she probaly needed some money at the time."

Hehehehehe.. you did a write-up on him. I wonder did that make him go crazy.

We ordered cable, and this one guy came over to install it. He was really, really weird, he had a speach impediment, and over-emphasized nearly everything he said. He than began to follow me around, and got obsessed and somehow thought we were friends... He eventually got arrested after falling off of the top of a large sattelite dish.

Actually the pizza driver he killed was a 40-year-old mother of 2. It was really sad.

I worked at Domino's because I was like 19 and didn't have the knowledge I have now. At least I was the store manager.

Thats because school is seriously fucked up.

P.S. When you applied at cisco, Domino's just had to look good on your resume. Or did you leave it out Actually, I don't leave it out. I don't hide the fact that I'm only starting to persue web development as a career. Domino's, if nothing else, shows longevity at my jobs. My previous job was 6 months as the Director of Web Development for a chain of resorts, and between that and the other sites I've worked on, I got in.

Hey Sir Phoenix, I have a question. I took a screenshot of my Renegade score at 1337. I cut it out and now for the picture it is just a small box in a big white void. How do I make it a tiny box and have no white surrounding it like your post count one?

Crop the image. This just makes the area that you choose the entire image. Just select the small box with the crop tool in whatever program you're using and viola.

(In photoshop it's the two right angles that cross each other, in the top of the tool bar.)
